Fiona Shilton

YOUR ESTATE LAWYER

MEDIA KIT

What key moments led you to starting your business?

My story is like an Eaton Mess; a sweet dessert invented by a hyperactive Labrador who squashed a strawberry pavlova in a picnic basket...

After drawing up thousands of wills that were designed to set families up to fail, or defending wills written to be used as a weapon after death, I felt people deserved better.

Creating a business where being vulnerable, authentic and brave is celebrated has been the most empowering decision of my life.

FIONA SHILTON, YOUR ESTATE LAWYER

Fiona Shilton is on a mission to change the conversation around death.

As an experienced lawyer specialising in wills and estates Fiona's unique and big-hearted approach to discussing life's significant issues has helped make end-of-life planning a safe, empowering, and life changing experience for hundreds of families and individuals across Adelaide and the Adelaide Hills.

In September 2022 Fiona was recognised as the SA Woman Emerging Woman In Business in recognition of her passion for changing the face of estate planning and creating a business that supports her family and wider community.

Thank you for being a voice for those who have no voice; and for others, to find their voice and use it. Thank you for saying that your duckies do not always line up and the pavlova get squashed. That makes you a person that can be understood as well as understands. Thank you for the thinking questions and unpressured time commitment.

MEDIA QUESTIONS

Is talking about death with a stranger easier or harder than talking about death with your family?

Is it common for people to put off writing a will even though they know it's important?

You've been pretty vocal in the past about DIY wills and how much you dislike them - is that because it does you out of a job or are there other reasons you're against them?

On your website you say 'brave is kind'; what do you mean by that?

When should you update your will or do you just do it once?
